The American Evening

For most employees of the Federal government, work continues unchanged when a new man moves into the White House. Employees of the Bureau of Reclamation, the Labor-Management Services Administration, or the Commodity Exchange Authority all go about their jobs in their accustomed ways, ~~xxxx~~ though changes of administration policy can ultimately have an effect. ^{Even} ~~The~~ pattern of most intelligence work--collection and the production of finished intelligence for a considerable number of officials--remains ~~undisturbed~~ ^{undisturbed.} But for those who are turning out intelligence specifically for the President, ~~everything is apt to change as soon as a~~ ^{immediate} ~~himself, the appearance of a new Chief Executive signals the onset of~~

~~a whole new intelligence.~~ How wide-ranging will ~~be~~ the new President's foreign countries and in international relations? ^{will large} interest in ~~foreign affairs~~ How much intelligence? ^{will be} ~~great~~ ^{be in order} and frequent servings, or modest portions only as absolutely ^{requires} ~~needed~~?

Will he want ^{merely} ~~only~~ facts, or facts plus interpretation and analysis?

were at the LBJ ranch. Late in the afternoon, the PDB received a phone call from Bromley Smith, who said that Gen. Clifton had called from the ranch.

He had been shaken by the
~~The first sentence of the Vietnamese item had shaken Clifton, who was also~~

~~was~~ concerned about the whole piece. The President was out on the lake ~~at~~ and was not expected back for several hours. Clifton at first felt he should summon the President to shore. ^{Smith} discussed the matter with the PDB writer, Thomas Patton, and there was further conversation with Clifton, who decided ~~that~~ simply to add the word "but" after the first sentence and continue with the ~~second~~ somewhat reassuring second sentence. The case ^{was a vivid} ~~illustrated~~ ^{again} of the potentiality of the PDB for causing excitement in the White House ~~family~~ entourage.

Foreign developments often ~~usually~~ ^{generally} provoked ~~alarm~~ spirited reactions from ~~the~~ Bromley Smith, but it was not often that he expressed surprise ~~at~~ ^{nature of the} ~~kind of~~ intelligence he was reading, substance apart. One such occasion, however, came when the PDB ran an item about dissension between Rumania and the Soviet Union. An intercept revealed
